26th March 2015

Social Sandbox is a one day session which uses a tried and tested design thinking process to help you to develop potential social enterprise ideas which could future proof your social venture.

The approach being used is cutting edge and aims to change how people think about social issues and problems. This could lead to looking at alternative solutions which could create a business opportunity.

The new South Eastern Social Enterprise Hub, which comprises Downpatrick and Lisburn premises, is one of eleven new Hubs established across the nine Social Investment Zones under the Northern Ireland Executive's Delivering Social Change Framework.

With £4million of funding from the Executive's Delivering Social Change Fund, the initiative will tackle poverty, dereliction and unemployment by encouraging social enterprise business start-up within local communities.
